Course on Research Ethics (C.O.R.E.) The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine

Description

The Johns Hopkins University is deeply committed to the protection of human research subjects. This commitment begins with comprehensive compulsory education and training of its faculty, student, and staff researchers who conduct human subjects research. The Course on Research Ethics (C.O.R.E.) is a one-day activity in the School of Medicine designed to address key concepts in human subjects protection in specific research communities. C.O.R.E. combines lectures and small group discussions to provide practical information on the ethical issues involved in research protocol development and implementation.

Who Should Attend

This activity is intended for faculty and fellows engaged in human subjects research, but available to all members of the research team.

Objectives

After attending this activity, the participant will demonstrate the ability to:

- Describe the context for the development of research ethics at the national and local levels
- Recognize aspects of study design that can be ethically problematic including subject selection, research-related risks, conflicts of interest, and use of vulnerable populations
- Describe the key concepts in informed consent including respect for autonomy, voluntariness, decision-making capacity, disclosure of information, and understanding
- Describe methods of protecting privacy and confidentiality in the context of human subjects research
- Recognize the key concepts in the responsible conduct of research, including data acquisition and management, mentor/trainee responsibilities, publication practices and authorship standards, conflicts of interest and commitment, and scientific misconduct

Accreditation Statement

The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

Credit Designation Statement

The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine designates this educational activity for a maximum of 8.75 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™ (1.00 credit hour for the web-based pre-course survey and pre-knowledge assessment, 3.75 credits for the morning general session, 3.0 credits for the optional afternoon fellows program, and 1.00 credit hour for the post-knowledge assessment and web-based course evaluation.) Physicians should only claim credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

Policy On Speaker and Provider Disclosure

It is the policy of The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine that the speaker and provider disclose real or apparent conflicts of interest relating to the topics of this educational activity, and also disclose discussions of unlabeled/unapproved uses of drugs or devices during their presentation(s). The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine OCME has established policies in place that will identify and resolve all conflicts of interest prior to this educational activity. Detailed disclosure will be made in the activity handout materials.
